VACATION PET GEAR: The Must-Have Product List

The “dog days” of summer have arrived, which means that the toasty days and long, cool summer evenings will beckon pets and their owners to be out and about as much as possible.

From backyard barbeques to vacation travels, pets will be included in their family’s summer fun. The only question is, how prepared are you for your pet’s summer activities?

With the majority of pets being accustomed to remaining indoors – 52 percent of dogs and 64 percent of cats, as reported by the 2009-2010 National Pet Owners survey by the American Pet Products Association – their greater risks are overheating and dehydrating. As temperatures continue to rise over the next few months, pet owners should make sure they have ways to keep their pets bounding through any exciting outdoor adventure.

From water toys to traveling totes, here are some products to help owners enjoy the summer while keeping their pets safe and happy.
